History of Warrens

Known today as the Cranberry Capital of Wisconsin, Warrens was originally a logging town. The first to begin lumbering in what is now the Village of Warrens were George Warren and James Gamble. In 1868, the West Wisconsin Railway laid rails from Tomah to Black River Falls and these two enterprising men set up a sawmill at the present site of Warrens. Soon there was a general store, flour and grist mill, creamery, a hotel, bank and other businesses in what was then known as Warren Mills. In 1892, the name of the post office was changed officially to Warrens.

Even before logging began in the Warrens area, the early immigrant settlers had begun to clear the land. Many area farmers worked in the lumbering industry to supplement their income. Following the decline of logging, agriculture regained its position as the principle source of income, particularly dairying and small fruit growing. In 1923, the Warrens Fruit Growers Association shipped 50 carloads of fresh strawberries. Mint was another important crop at one time. Harvesting of sphagnum was and still is done in the Warrens area.

Of all the agricultural products grown in the area, cranberries are what we are best known for today. Native Americans and early settlers harvested the wild cranberries that grew in abundance in the area. Just when the first cultivation of cranberries took place is unknown, but there are cranberry marshes in our area that have been producing the state's No. 1 fruit crop since the early 1870s.
